

Ex-King Manuel of Portugal, who is just another royal exile, is shown here with his wife, walking along the beautiful boulevards of Cannes, France.
Kadel & Herbert.

The Prince of Wales, who has left India on his way to Japan, saw many strange sights in a strange land. Among them was this group of Orientals, consisting of the Rajah Sahreb Nafod, his son and three grandsons. Central News.

An unusual photograph of a floating pawnshop, snapped in the streets of Venice. It makes daily trips from station to station, taking care of those in need of ready cash. Gilliams Service.

"The Navy Put 'Em Across" is the name of this statue by Ulric H. Ellerhausen, shown at the spring exhibit of the National Academy of Design.
G. W. Harting.

Lenine is reported suffering from an incurable disease, and Russia talks of M. Kalenin, president of the All-Russian Executive Committee of the Soviets, as his successor. P. & A.

A rare photograph of the Holy Carpet of Islam is shown here. It is located in an open field near Cairo, Egypt, surrounded by thousands of tents, prepared for Mohamedan pilgrims.
Kadel & Herbert.

This is the Duchess of Westminster, who is going "trouping" in the English provinces for charity.
Underwood & Underwood.

The camel, emblem of the god of thirst, is useful, though not ornamental. The Commonwealth of Australia makes good use of the huge "ship of the desert" to draw heavy loads. The picture shown here depicts eleven head drawing a wagon laden with thousands of pounds of wool.